Tom O'Brien, resident of Oregon City, asked the City Attorney if the State of Oregon still had an open public meetings law. Was the Urban Renewal Commission exempt from that law?

Bill Kabeiseman, City Attorney said yes, there was an open public meetings law in Oregon which applied to all public agencies including the Urban Renewal Commission.

Mr. O'Brien said this past Tuesday he was going to the PRAC meeting and saw a notice stating that a quorum of the Urban Renewal Commission would meet on September 28, 2017 while participating in a design charette for the 922 Main Street project. He had not received notice of this meeting and it was not on the calendar on the City's website.

Mayor Holladay clarified there was no meeting of the Urban Renewal Commission, there was a notice of a possible quorum present at this event. Eric Underwood, Economic Development Manager, said it was an open meeting. The noticing was done according to the law.

Mr. O'Brien commented on the large number of executive session meetings of the City Commission and Urban Renewal Commission. One of the Commission's goals was to be transparent and involve more citizens. He did not think the Commission was working towards that goal. The public had not been made aware that there was no longer a tenant at the train station or the negotiations that had occurred.
